Idk. It's weird, every time I visit the SAMB, it almost kinda feels like they're stuck in their forum GvE days, just minus the GvE.

I mean, it could just be that our forum etiquette is different. It could also be partly that when I was on there, it was GvE days. Pre-GvE, actually.

I beg to differ, the SAMB is filled with very mature people. None of us ever get in any fights and if there's any problem we work out in a mature respectful matter we all are just-I guess you could say like the song called "Stressed Out" our lives are really stressful and to be goofy and be ourselves and act like kids every now and than helps with the stress and life. The SAMB isn't the slightest bit uptight, EVER. I look at the forums like this:

T39CMB: the help

WoFMB: the support

SAMB: the restore or the rainbow in the storm of life

I wasn't there when GvE occurred. So, basically, from my understanding, you're saying it's conflicted over there, just without the GvE? I'm sorry, I'm probably misunderstanding. Also, most over there are younger than those over here. Of course we, as the SAMBers, more immature. :) But I am proud of how we handle conflicts/drama when they do arise. It's quick and efficient (I hope).

No offense intended at any part of this post and especially the above!

Can I just point out

Every forum has its own personality and vibe and they all have faults but that's what makes them unique

If you're looking for a more relaxed and sleepy platform, go to the SAMB
If you want constant stimulation and activity, go to the WoFMB
I can't speak for 39CMB but from what I've seen there's a very nice, if smaller community there as well

We all can have preferences, but no forum is really better than another

Especially because we have a continuous stream of users hopping from one MB to the other, sterotyping each platform isn't exactly the way to go, but y'all do y'all

Anyone realize that each forum kind of matches their color aesthetic?

The WoFMB has a lot of bright colors, with a lot of movement and energy in the background

The SAMB has a lot of duller colors, and a calmer, more tranquil background

The 39CMB is simplistic and kind of barebones but still has some power behind it

(On mobile) PHIL WHY DID U EAT MY POST-

@Key and Ishmael, those are good comparisons, actually. I agree.

WHat I really meant by this post is that while I know the SAMBers CAN BE mature and stuff, I have been over there many times and have seen stuff, I meant the vibe as a whole and most posts seem like what we used to post GvE era, which I'll explain...

@Galaxian, what I sort of mean by "GvE era" or stuff is that the we and the forums were younger, and we were a lot more..excited? And anyone on the internet looks back on themselves with cringe. GvE days were fun, and we had a lot of...drama. It's hard to explain to people that weren't there. We had a lot of OC posts back then, and mostly simple role playing like walks over and eats cookie
there were a lot of threads that just dissolved into role playing, or starting like that. I remember something about I-forgot-his-name's coffee on the SAMB? Which isn't here, but it's the kind of thing I'm talking about.

Well, every forum has its good bits and its worse ones, but they're all great as a whole! Mostly, the only reason I hardly go on the others is because I'm too used to this one.

Yeah, Olvan's coffee!

and yeah, I don't mean it's a bad thing, just as Hiraeth said, the WoFMB isn't quite as « excited », so we feel more mature in that way.

Its almost like we're less « fun », but still fun, if ya know what I mean

I've always thought of the WoFMB as a city and the SAMB as a suburban area around that city, and I very much agree with Ishmael.

The WoFMB is an overall great community, but there are a few things that really get on my nerves ~

-I always feel like I'm walking on eggshells when posting. Will this hurt someone? Does my perspective conflict with someone else's? However this probably is due to the fact that I am a very insecure person by nature.

-The second flaw is something that I notice a lot (Yes I stalk through message board history.) and always desperately want to point out: Usually when a... well recognized person says something that is deemed offensive, the community scolds them softly. Whereas someone less known is often harshly reprimanded in comparison to the other person.

Now before Debbie attacks me, I just have to say that I can name many flaws of the SAMB, and that my opinion is mine alone and I still see this forum as wonderful place filled with amazing people including you all. :)
